

Farbe Bekennen

May Opitz

by Esther Schleidweiler and Myra Mae Cabantac

isolation

- total number of Afro-Germans is small
- lack of role models
- growing up in a society which stigmatizes people of different color ignorance

- unawareness of Afro-Germans' existence
- inability to distinguish between Afro-Germans and “real” foreigners
- “normal Germans” are seen as insensitive towards Afro-Germans

“Zwischenwelt”

- the racism in German society
- causes Afro-Germans
- to create a new identity for themselves
- in order to be able to deal with being treated differently